
corr

syntax: `corr(x,y)`

purpose: Computes the correlation coefficient, r^2 , between two variables.
`corr(x,y)` has the same value as `corr(y,x)`.

see also: REGRESSION, which computes r^2 along with the parameters of the linear regression.

This document is an excerpt from Resampling Stats in MATLAB Daniel T. Kaplan Copyright (c) 1999 by Daniel T. Kaplan, All Rights Reserved This document differs from the published book in pagination and in the omission (unintentional, but unavoidable for technical reasons) of figures and cross-references from the book. It is provided as a courtesy to those who wish to examine the book, but not intended as a replacement for the published book, which is available from Resampling Stats, Inc. www.resample.com 703-522-2713
